1. Volume has been transferred from still wine to glühwein and lambrusco, which have been revised up. Change affects German, Italian and Spanish origins.
2. Bottler data has been revised and Aldi estimates removed to avoid double-counting. This affects Andreas Oster, Rheinberg, ZGM and Peter Mertes – this business is retail-focused and geared towards value and/or low-priced price segments. Previously, German bottlers classified as German; this has been broken out by country of origin.
3. Revisions to 2017 data include: Amselfelder (moved from Serbian to Kosovan), Cuvée Mythique, Antinori, Mezzacoronna, Celliers des Dauphins, Torres, Kourtakis and Cavino (Greek still wine is now higher than previously stated), Rotkäppchen Fruchtsecco, Schloss Wachenheim Private Label,
4. Freixenet Cava (Cava 2015-17 is now smaller than previously stated), Schlumberger and Krim Sekt.

Spirits

1. Spirits volumes are higher than previously stated following revisions to liqueurs (mainly egg and cream). These increases are partially offset by the removal of 'other spirits' and decreases to liqueur ranges and korn. The IWSR's estimates for korn/schnapps are lower than previously, bringing the IWSR's numbers more in line with (but still higher than) official estimates.

Whisky

1. The Macallan 12yr is an amalgam of outgoing Fine Oak and incoming Double Cask.
2. Revisions to 2017 data include: Jim Beam Red Stag, Maker's Mark. Flavoured and premium Bourbon are now lower than previously stated.

3. Southern Comfort has been reclassified as US whiskey from 2018, following reformulation of the product. Historical volumes remain classified as liqueur.
4. Old Canada has been removed as this was a duplicate of McGuinness. Canadian whisky is now lower in 2016 and 2017.
5. High-end German whisky numbers have been revised up.

Gin, Vodka, Tequila, Rum

1. Seagram's gin was removed from the market in 2018.
2. Revisions to 2017 data include: Grasovka, Sierra, El Jimador, Patrón, Havana Club 3yr, Captain Morgan White. Flavoured vodka is now higher than previously stated and white rum lower. Changes to Sierra mean changes to the trend for white and gold tequila in 2017.
3. Pyat Ozer, Zlatogor, Khlibniy Dar and Stock 1906 have been reclassified as Standard;
4. Khortytza vodka has changed to Five Lakes and estimates restated for 2015-2017.
5. Estimates for The Kraken have been added historically. Flavoured rum is now higher than previously stated.

Flavoured Spirits

1. Revisions to 2017 data include: Sambalita Liqueur, Helbing Kümmel, Mozart Liqueur, Berliner Luft, Ramazzotti Amaro.
2. Absinthe is now higher than previously reported due to the inclusion of Abtshof's Absinth 66.

Mixed Drinks

1. Still wine: Historical revisions were necessary for still wine in order to accurately depict the true size of the category. Given the geographic nuances and varietal distinctions, wine has traditionally been difficult to track at any level of granularity. After a thorough review of the top several hundred wine producers in the market and by continually working closely with wine clients, more brand-level information became available which was not previously being captured by volume lying within the 'others' lines. In addition, the new tracking of varietals allowed for further focus and details across the entire category. Overall, the performance trend for still wine remains consistent even with historical revisions.
2. Other wine: Since the sangria category has growing rapidly, additional time was spent focusing on ensuring key brands were being captured. The result of this process was the discovery of Capriccio sangria, which had not been previously reported, so additional volumes needed to be applied historically.
3. Agave-based spirits: The tequila category had been revised down as more detailed information was provided for the Patrón tequila portfolio. As a result, certain brand lines required the historical removal of volumes. While a portion of the volumes were removed, the historical performance trend remained.
4. Mixed drinks: Increased volumes were a result of additional coverage of this category and also based on the rapid growth of core brands and largescale innovation across all segments. Emphasis was placed on capturing volumes for the leading company portfolios as well as competitive brands. The addition of Truly Hard Seltzer also added significant volumes as this was not previously captured. Additional coverage of emerging brands in the wellness or functional alcoholic beverage category was also a priority.
5. No-/low-alcohol beer: Revisions to the non-alcoholic beer category were necessary as additional volumes were captured from smaller producers. The low-alcohol beer category came into existence in 2016, yet 2018 was the first year the IWSR assigned volumes to this new category, so additional volumes have been reported from the category's inception to date.

6. Cider: The cider category was revised after the addition of volumes from smaller producers and suppliers. Knowing growth in the cider category has been coming from smaller local 'craft' producers, extra time was dedicated to reporting on volumes for as many cider brands active in the US market.
